MARCUS J. C. JOHNSON

Treasurer & Director of Youth Development and Mentorship
TCF FAMILY LEGACY FOUNDATION

Marcus J. C. Johnson graduated from the University of Southern California with a Bachelor of Science degree in Economics. While attending USC, he competed as a Division I collegiate athlete before continuing his basketball career professionally overseas. He later expanded his commitment to young people through coaching, mentoring, and athletic training.

Marcus brings an essential lived perspective to TCF FAMILY LEGACY FOUNDATION. As a child, he experienced housing instability while continuing to meet the demands of school, sports, personal development, and everyday life. With neither parent having graduated from college, Marcus became the second college graduate in his immediate family, following his older brother. He understands the challenges unhoused children face and the discipline, guidance, opportunity, and consistent support required to move beyond those circumstances.

As Treasurer, Marcus supports the responsible stewardship of the Foundation's financial resources and helps maintain accountability for every contribution entrusted to TCF. His education, leadership experience, and disciplined approach strengthen the Foundation's commitment to integrity, transparency, and responsible financial oversight.

As Director of Youth Development and Mentorship, Marcus helps shape programs that support the whole child while TCF addresses the needs of the whole family. He understands that the journey from homelessness to permanent housing and homeownership requires focus, discipline, determination, and shared goals. Parents cannot be expected to navigate that journey successfully while their children's academic, emotional, social, athletic, and developmental needs are left unsupported.

Through mentorship, personal-development training, educational support, athletic guidance, access to resources, and individualized success planning, Marcus helps young people remain focused on their own growth while understanding the goals their families are working to achieve. His leadership helps bring parents and children onto the same page so the entire family can move forward together with greater stability, accountability, and purpose. This combination of lived experience, proven discipline, compassion, and practical leadership makes Marcus a vital member of the TCF Board of Directors.
